Lights over Boston Bay

Shortly before 8.30 a.m. on Tuesday, Mr. David James was driving north on Mortlock Terrace when, opposite the Catholic Church, he saw in the dark sky ahead of him, two bright white lights.

The lights were close together and stationary, then they dipped swiftly to the right, were momentarily stationary again, then disappeared.

"I couldn't keep my eyes off them," Mr. James said today.

During the morning he made a number of enquiries but was unable to find any explanation of the two lights over Boston Bay.
